Mission Statement Provis Institute of Political Economics Your PIPE-line to Liberty

Economics for People Because they Matter
Not Theories for Professionals

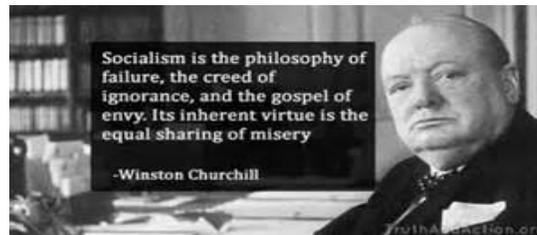

Economics is a study of man's condition looking mostly at value and opportunity. The below statement covers our current condition.

There is nothing in our society that we know less about, that effects our lives more profoundly than economics. And politicians use this fact constantly to control our lives and to get votes based on false information and ideas.

We are led like lambs to the slaughter because by and large we don't understand any better than the lambs about what is happening.

The direction of education in our current learning centers in the areas of economics and politics is focused more and more on socialism and control of the individual. Gone are the days of liberty as established by the Founding Fathers. In our current teaching environment it is not possible to pursue a degree in economics without engaging in constant arguments with professors trying to foist their socialistic views on us. And along with that, politics has also become a hotbed of socialism and the destroying of the American view.

In addition, some colleges and universities of today have allowed and encouraged an environment that is far from wholesome.

Those of us with a desire for education without a socialist indoctrination need a source that encourages learning and teaches the subject matter. Therefore, The Provis Institute of Political Economics has established such an environment using the internet since it is still relatively safe.

A very important part of limiting outside control is to avoid accreditation. Accreditation's pretended goal is to insure proper learning, but it is really a means of taking control of the subject matter of the school and of the individual. Another womb to the tomb concept. Individuals must shoulder responsibility for their own lives and throw off the shackles of those whose aim is to control us by pretending to protect us.

This Institute is focused primarily on practical economics with a close secondary emphasis on politics. We also cover the Constitution as it is the foundation of our Republic and must be understood. The history of America is an important part of our lives and therefore an accurate understanding of how our nation was founded is imperative.

Practical economics is a hidden but vital subject. Often our accepted learning institutions have made economics a very difficult and theoretical subject. In this way individuals are turned away from a subject that is absolutely imperative to their wellbeing. The Provis Institute of Political Economics will endeavor to treat economics in a way that is easily understood. This will dismay economists whose teachings and theories have convoluted the subject to the point of confusion. It is not a hard subject and we will teach it that way.

The powers behind the scenes have also completely destroyed our history to suit their own goals. They have complicated the Constitution so severely that we think only the best educated and smartest people in the country can grasp it. Nothing is further from the truth. Our goal is for every student to have a grasp of what is driving their lives, what government is doing to us, and why they are doing it. The Constitution is a large part of what our students will be learning. It is the basis of our freedoms and was not written for scholars but for the people. The people of the 1700s understood it and we of the 2000s must also.

The courses of study will be comprehensive and challenging so that the degree will be of value in the job market. Companies will be able to contact us to insure that this institute is not just a paper mill. For instance, the baccalaureate degree requires 20 courses which are the equivalent of 3 credit hours each, along with 2 years of successful studies at another college, university or some other formal environment. This is equivalent to anything required by any other institution.

Funding is also a very important part of control. Funding always eventually controls the receiver of the funds! Therefore, The Provis Institute of Political Economics will not accept outside funding of any sort from any source. There will be no scholarships or financial aid, etc. Students will be able to pay for their education without going into debt.

To allow this, tuition, fees, and books will always be priced low enough to be within the reach of anybody who wants a quality education.

There is a one time fee of $99 for the degree program. Yes, you can earn all three for the one time registration fee at the start of the program

Bachelors Degree     $300

Masters Degree        $425

Doctors Degree        $600

Books needs are minimal, approximately $30, most information can be gleaned from the internet.

Please email me so we can decide on your next step to a quality education that is next to none.

Thank you for looking into our school of learning instead a school of theory, control and socialism.
